

Riverstone opens Kensington and Fulham later living developments

London-based later living developer Riverstone has launched two luxury schemes in Kensington and Fulham, the first of at least 10 it expects to deliver in the capital, Property Week can reveal.

Riverstone Kensington

Jekka and Andy Sturgeon Gardens

Riverstone Kensington comprises 190 apartments, offering a mix of one-, two- and three-bedroom apartments. The Fulham development will have 161 one-, two- and three-bedroom apartments.

Both schemes will also include a library, bar, restaurant, cinema, a spa and club room.

Residents will also automatically become members of the Riverstone club, which will allow access to all Riverstone schemes.

The Good Care Group has been appointed to deliver the care services to residents.

The news follows the hiring of Dr Zoe Wyrko as its wellbeing director, who will consult on delivering a holistic approach to wellbeing to residents.

Riverstone Kensington

Riverstone chairman Penny Hughes said: "Over-65s relish living in central London, in the neighbourhoods they know and love.

"Combine that with stylish apartments, all the exceptional amenities and hospitality services they require, and we believe we have created a compelling new ideal for people with years of enjoyable living ahead."

Jason Leek, chief executive of Riverstone, added: "Riverstone will be a truly engaging and welcoming environment with our wellbeing team on hand to support residents as much or as little as they like.

"Drawing upon modern lifestyle medicine and mental health practices – all known to support longevity and wellbeing – we have built a bespoke and growing team of partners and experts to alter the perception of later living."